EDITORIALTHE CHANGING FACE OF UFOLOGY.

With UFO reports becoming scarcer towards the end of 2010, this might be the time for a general appraisal into all aspects of the subject particularly from the changing social habits of potential witnesses. Earlier studies have shown UFOs appear to occur in waves related to the sun spot cycles of approximately 11 years from peak to trough - at least during the twentieth century. On the other hand UFO activity may be constant, but the ability to see them varies according to the amounts of energy being released from the Sun and its effect on the human population.

For the purposes of these observations, let us suppose "Year Zero" to be 1947, when the Kenneth Arnold experience lead to the term "Flying Saucer" being universally used. From 1947 to 2010 enormous changes have taken place. The immediate post-war household had no television or DVDs available and family members would spend their evenings walking to a pub or cinema increasing the chances of a UFO sighting in the less well lit streets of their town or village. The 2010 family in general remains firmly glued to their TV set. (A recent poll suggests 25% of the population quote watching television as their favourite pastime).

A new type of lifestyle has now been identified - the persons who never set foot outside their front door, known as "Sofalisers". These people create their own social life around watching television and at the same time texting to "cyber friends" on social networking sites. It is quite possible they can work from home all the time if they have the necessary computer skills and links, and order all their household needs over the Internet which are then delivered to their front door. On the odd occasions they go outside they are continuously monitoring their text messages or are engrossed in conversation on their mobile phone - hardly being aware of their surroundings. This is a perfectly legitimate lifestyle - whether it is harmful to mental and physical wellbeing has yet to be established, but the point is that none of this emerging class of people seems likely to be looking up at the sky at any time and see UFOs. Most members of this new lifestyle are in the under 40s age group, who should have the best visual awareness. Older persons out walking their dogs are no doubt looking at the sky, but of course are likely to have weaker eyesight.

Back in 1947 the vast population of commercial jet airliners had not yet come into service and travellers went to America, Africa, Australia and New Zealand by sea in large liners taking up to 6 weeks to complete their journey. The concept of one minute intervals between aircraft landings as now experienced at Heathrow was unheard of, and more recent airports such as Gatwick and Stanstead not yet developed. The only aircraft in greater numbers than today would be military types on 24 hour alert due to the new concept of the "Cold War". Swarms of American airmen in full uniform could be observed taking their leave at the weekends in local English towns and villages. Overall the misidentification of aircraft would be far less in 1947, once the flight paths of the military aircraft had been established.

The age of artificial satellites began in the 1960s, but commercial usage took another 20 years to become established. By 2010 we have satellites for hundreds of television channels, navigational aids and weather forecasting, and many secret spying operations, no doubt. In 1947 there was nothing on the edge of space of Earthly origin except weather balloons. It is fairly easy to recognise the brightness and speed of a satellite among the background stars when viewing the night sky, and even the very much brighter International Space Station can be identified from orbital charts. The 1947 observer had only the known movements of planets and stars and the occasional shooting star/meteor or a rare comet to record. Anything moving at a steady rate in the night sky then would have been worthy of a UFO report. But would the mindset of the time lead to a report being made?

"Leisure Creations" have recently been the bane of UFO watchers. Certainly back in 1947 there was the annual letting off of fireworks on November 5th (and no other night). From the 1980s onwards we have been aware of laser beams being projected into the night sky and these have been visible up to 30 miles from source when reflected off low clouds. We are still learning about recognising a reflected laser beam and have been fooled on a number of occasions. From the earlier, purely scientific experiments, laser displays have now entered the pop and party scenes and are usually experienced on Friday and Saturday nights in the summer months.

Our most recent problem has been the advent of the "Chinese Lantern" in British skies - a miniature hot air balloon which floats upwards with the greatest of ease. Anything up to a hundred of these can be fired up and released at a party or wedding reception within 5-10 minutes. It seems odd that a device that was invented by the Chinese hundreds of years ago could generate so many false UFO reports in 2010! Clearly the British observer has not had enough experience in identifying these objects, unlike fireworks which people up to 100 years old have seen throughout their lifetime. Over a 5 year period lanterns have progressed from an Internet only purchase to more general sales in High Street novelty shops, so their use will increase until boredom sets in! Unfortunately a very high percentage of 2009-10 UFO reports look to be mistaken Chinese Lanterns. We are continuing to monitor the signs to look out for from many reports and our own trials.

With this glut of artificial objects in the night sky of 2010, one might conclude that the most realistic records of UFO sightings are to be found in the 1947-62 period - the first 15 years post Arnold or Roswell. However we are becoming increasingly aware of a large number of hoaxed encounters and photographs in that era some of which were definitely created by secret service organisations such as the CIA - in the most part to confuse the Soviet Union spies at the height of the "Cold War". An article by Brian Burden in this edition throws some light on this subject.

Away from objects seen in the sky - what other evidence is there for the presence of alien activity? To my mind the most convincing and enduring is the crop circle phenomenon, which, according to my reckoning is now in its 31st year of continuous activity. It is now 20 years since the so-called "Doug and Dave" scam although those who wish to debunk the subject choose to quote this as evidence. Crop circles have the advantage of being in position for days, weeks or even months before they are cut away so much information can be obtained on site and the energy "signature" remains on the landscape for years afterwards. The geometrical perfection of these creations is indicative of high intelligence at work and nobody is even close to explaining it.

Another mystery on the ground which has drifted on for many years is that of animal mutilations, centred on domestic cattle or sheep. Are these animals subject to a satanic ritual or are they being surgically examined by aliens? The same thing is happening on both sides of the Atlantic so one suspects a local cult is not involved. Has the activity spread to wild animals or even humans? If people are being found systematically mutilated we can expect a massive cover-up to be in operation - like the state of dead serviceman being returned from Afghanistan.

Our final enduring mystery is that of "Abduction". Are victims really encountering aliens or is it a religious manifestation - angels, BVM etc? It seems to depend on the culture of the abductee involved with the claims of aliens mainly exclusive to white, English speaking persons, but as far apart as Britain, USA and Australia. Vast reams of description come from victims and sometimes body markings are present, but no other physical evidence is apparent. There is common ground in that the alien abductors involved tend to be described similarly by victims, and the classic bug-eyed entity is now regarded as the standard alien form when illustrators get to work. Of course the physical reality of these beings still remains in doubt, and they are possibly coming through the collective consciousness in the same way as angels and demons did in previous eras.

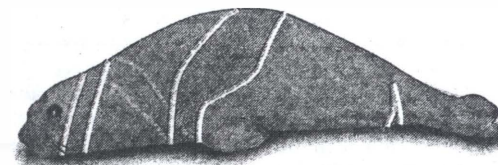

The ultimate question is whether sightings of UFOs, crop circles, animal mutilations and abductions are from one and the same origin. It is unlikely we shall ever be allowed to find out-----

LATEST NEWS STORIES

MUTILATED SEALS MYSTERY: A significant number of dead grey and common seals have been washed up on the beaches of north Norfolk and further numbers in Scotland. Reports in the press around mid-August 2010 suggest 50 carcasses in Norfolk, 18 around St Andrews Bay and the Firth of Forth and 7 along the Firth of Tay since last November. (Although numbers vary according to newspapers). These have a common feature in that they have all been mutilated by a single smooth edged cut starting at the head and spiralling round the body in a corkscrew fashion. Injuries are described as not being consistent with any known phenomenon such as lacerations caused by fishing nets or boat propellers, although researchers believe it is possible that the animals are harmed by a single rotating blade.

Corkscrew killer: An artist's depiction of the wounds found on dead seals

Along the East Anglian coast in particular, off shore wind farm projects are underway and many specialised craft are needed to carry the huge components to the sites. It is possible that the type of propulsion used by these vessels could have sucked in seals and shredded them. However one might expect the seal to be totally gutted as a result with a shut down of the propeller, such is their size. It is also assumed that seals are totally wary of shipping and keep well away from rotating screws or propellers as they have learnt over the past 150 years. It also seems likely that any known predator would have been capable of creating the type of injuries displayed by the animals.

The precision slicing is possibly linked to the animal mutilation phenomenon wherein cattle and sheep are surgically penetrated and their blood drained. Over many years no answers to this mysterious activity have been forthcoming. At the time of writing no additional information has been published, so the mutilated seals enigma remains unsolved.

UFOs TARGET NUCLEAR WEAPON SITES: It is now claimed with some certainty that "alien spacecraft" have interfered with nuclear weapons installations in Britain and America over a 60 year period from 1948. At a meeting convened at the Press Club in Washington D.C on September 27th, 2010, 7 former USAF officers or personnel, including Col. Charles Halt who witnessed the Rendlesham Forest incidents in Suffolk at the end of 1980, produced released secret documents and gave testimony that showed beyond doubt that certain bases with primed nuclear warheads or missiles were coming under regular observation or interference from other worldly objects. Both US and UK government's defence ministries have over the period done their utmost to cover up these situations probably to avert mass panic in the population at large.

The events at Rendlesham are well documented, but Col. Halt went into some detail and it was revealed that RAF Bentwaters next to the forest had the highest concentration of nuclear missiles stored there anywhere in Europe. He described the highly illuminated objects as being under intelligent control for certain. What is still not known is whether any nuclear weapons on the base were activated or compromised in some way over the 2 nights of UFO activity.

Elsewhere, former US Air Force Captain, Robert Salas, described when on duty at a nuclear base in Montana in 1967, a UFO hovering over the weapons store, and by some invisible means managed to shut down 10 Minuteman guided missiles temporarily. He stated: "There's a strong interest in our missiles by these objects. Wherever they come from I personally think they're not from planet Earth."

The evidence of these officers is endorsed by private UFO researcher, Robert Hastings, whose presentation on the subject was attended by CIUFOR at Oxford on November 24th 2010. (See Below).

ROBERT HASTINGS OXFORD LECTURE: An evening lecture entitled "UFOs The Secret Story" was held at the Jacqueline Du Pre Auditorium, St Hilda's College, Oxford, on November 24th. Robert Hastings flew in from New Mexico and gave a mindblowing talk in spite of having only 3 hours sleep. The audience of about 40 persons including 4 CIUFOR observers were shown large screen blow ups of secret US government documents, which, if genuine, prove beyond doubt that nuclear bases in the USA and UK have been visited by unidentified energy forms or craft. Clearly these closely guarded institutions were powerless to prevent this happening. Mr Hastings synopsis is set out below:

"The documents confirm that UFOs do exist and further reveal that these mysterious aerial objects are of the greatest concern to the U.S Air Force and various American intelligence agencies. Consequently, the files completely contradict frequent public denials about the UFO reality issued over the years by official spokesmen in Washington.

Specifically, the documents refer to UFOs repeatedly violating highly-sensitive airspace over nuclear weapon sites, including the Los Alamos National Laboratory, where nuclear weapons are designed. Other documents concern UFOs hovering over nuclear missiles launch silos or nuclear bomb storage bunkers. Still others refer to attempted aerial intercepts on UFOs by military jet fighters. So far as is known, all of these efforts have been unsuccessful."

Hasting's knowledge is the result of testimony of 120 former or retired US military personnel and the obtaining of hundreds of US Air Force, FBI and CIA documents declassified under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). In the course of the lecture it was revealed that UFOs were seen hovering over the Aldermarston nuclear weapons factory in 2004 (near Reading, Berks), and also reports of activity at Faslane, the Scottish base for Britain's nuclear submarines.

Questioned about why there are no photographs of the UFO activity when it was occurring frequently in the 1960s and 1970s, Hastings thinks there are indeed photographs and films, but these are too sensitive to be released in the same manner as the written word.

Mr Hastings did give a balanced view by naming various sceptical organisations opposed to his conclusions. He does not offer any definite answers, but suggests alien "guardians" are maybe surveying man's excursions into the ultimate discovery of splitting the atom. To read more about Robert Hastings revelations, log on to www.ufohastings.com

(In attending the presentation, delegates had a free pass to hear a talk by Mr Hastings' sponsor and host, the polymath and Oxford alumnus, Paul Parl, on May 4th 2011, which offers to reveal some sensational new material. Hopefully CIUFOR representatives will be there).

Having pieced together a lot more information on these nuclear base sightings via Hastings and the Washington press conference, it appears that beams of light are linked to the weapons silos and the "UFOs" may be unknown manifestations of energy or plasma created somehow by the very process of just having highly primed nuclear warheads ready to be launched at short notice. This phenomenon might be related in some way to Wilhelm Reich's 1950s experiments in atmospheric "cloud busting" and the concept of "orgone" energy, which sadly became out of control and were banned in the USA. Witnesses at the press conference, all described the objects as "silent" indicating they had no mass and were not craft in the conventional sense. By the same token should we not be seeing lots of UFOs near nuclear power stations, but these are not commonly reported as far as I am aware. It is only at weapons sites that the phenomenon is recorded.

The 1967 incident at Montana suggested 10 huge missiles were shut down temporarily - possibly due to an outage of power by an unknown mechanism that created artificial light forms and was interpreted as flying discs by personnel who witnessed it. When enormous forces are being manipulated can some "intelligent" creation result? The New Zealand plasma object which was widely reported in 1979 and seen from aircraft flying between the islands could have been brought into being by seismic activity in the mountainous terrain there. Even the poltergeist phenomenon is believed to be created by excessive energy discharges from adolescent young girls. All these conclusions suggest the various manifestations are not of alien origin, but this only represents one alternative view -

CHANGES TO CIUFOR LIBRARY AND RECORDS: The bequest from the late Lord Clancarty and additional UFO books and videos have been stored at Abingdon for the past 15 years. Now in consideration of the health and well being of the custodian, Tony Broad, who is entering his 90th year, single copies of all signed UFO books have been removed by the archivist, Bill Foley, for safe keeping. Non-UFO material has been disposed of and the remainder of the collection donated to the AFU project in Sweden. Officers from the AFU have collected masses of UFO material from many UK sources to create what will be the finest UFO archive in the world. It can readily be downloaded from the Internet by entering www.afu.se. There is no problem with language as nearly all references are in English.

The first batch of CIUFOR case files have now been computerised and a CD presented at Oxford which details all cases between 1959 and 1973. These can also be accessed from the AFU website. The original paper records have been returned with acid free interleaving to prevent deterioration over time. Later files are now being processed in Sweden with a likelihood that they will be fully computerised by mid-2011.

Any enquiries about early books or authors from the 1950s and 1960s should be made to the archivist, Bill Foley, on the hotline number.

CONTACT NOMINATED FOR EXTRATERRESTRIALS! The recent discovery of many planets outside the solar system has perhaps concentrated the minds of world leaders in preparing for the possibility of aliens arriving here in the near future. (Although many readers of Awareness magazine will have little doubt that this has already happened). Should the need arise, who would be the most appropriate person to make first contact - President Obama, David Cameron, the Pope? The United Nations have actually appointed an obscure Malaysian astrophysicist, Mazlan Othman, who heads the little known Office For Outer Space Affairs (UNOOSA).

YOUR CONTACT!

At a recent talk to fellow scientists, Othman commented: "The continued search for extraterrestrial communication, by several entities, sustains the hope that some day humankind will receive signals from extraterrestrials. When we do, we should have in place a co-ordinated response that takes into account all the sensitivities related to the subject. The UN is a ready-made mechanism for such co-ordination." (Sunday Times 20/9/10)

ANIMAL MUTILATIONS OR RUSTLERS? A recent case of 4 pedigree sheep being found mutilated in West Oxfordshire (Oct 29th, 2010) set the alarm bells ringing with initial reports indicating that this was the work of the phantom surgical organ removers. In fact the full story emerged later on that these animals were slaughtered for their meat, as the carcasses were nowhere to be seen. In fact blood, guts and skins were scattered all around, so clearly this was not an example of the clinical incisions associated with the "animal mutilations" phenomenon. Most cases reported in the press do appear to be cases of "rustling" especially in areas of high immigration wherein hungry illegals used to slaughtering animals are likely to be responsible - in fact a number of highly protected swans are believed to have been killed by groups of living rough, East Europeans. Remote areas along the Welsh border look to be the most frequented places for the unanswered mutilations to be found in Britain.

ALIEN LIFE FOUND IN LAKE? NASA had built up expectations in the days before announcing the discovery of a bacterium living in Mono Lake, California, USA, which utilised the element ARSENIC in its life cycle. (Dec. 2nd, 2010). [Most interested parties had probably expected an announcement about finding life on one of the recently discovered planets.] Arsenic is one of the most toxic elements known, being particularly lethal when ingested by humans. Here at the bottom of a salt and arsenic riddled lake, close to the Yosemite National Park, is a life form which comfortably absorbs arsenic and even incorporates it into its DNA structure. The scientific team involved have shown the bacterium can behave in a conventional manner utilising phosphorus in its molecules, but may suddenly switch to a 'weird' mode of life which depends on arsenic.

How does this lead to the wider possibilities of life on other planets? The discovery in California shows 'life' is not restricted to the bio-chemical systems utilised by humans and most other animals and plants, but can be created using so-called toxic elements as well, which may be the only choice available on other worlds deep in space.

Professor Paul Davies, a cosmologist, from Arizona State University, has proposed a 'weird life' theory which suggests alternative forms of life already exist on Earth, but we do not know what we are looking for. He thinks it is likely that life on Earth evolved more than once using a variety of elements, but the hydrogen/carbon/oxygen/phosphorus system is the one that dominates all advanced life structures we know today. Should we humans ever get to shake the hand of an alien made up from arsenic, mercury, lead and cadmium, perhaps both parties would instantly drop dead being totally toxic to each other!!

WIKILEAKS - ANY UFO NEWS? Having struggled for many years to get UFO files released in the days of paper records, we now find an amazing website, WikiLeaks, has launched an exposure of no less than 250,000 US diplomatic e-mails/memoranda for open viewing on the Internet. This confidential information, mainly of a personal nature, has embarrassed world leaders in many countries. No doubt only a limited number of these items will appear before the authorities black out the site.

It has already been established that former Prime Minister, Gordon Brown, appealed on behalf of UFO hacker, Gary McKinnon, in 2009, via the American ambassador. Brown proposed that McKinnon would plead guilty to compromising the Pentagon's computers, and then serve his prison sentence (probably a few months at the most) in a British jail. His request was met with a frosty silence!

Any further leaks relating to UFOs which might be of interest to CIUFOR should be notified to our address if possible. Already Interpol are searching for the WikiLeaks supremo, Julian Assange, a 39 year old Australian, who is accused of rape in Sweden in addition to releasing the many thousands of confidential files.

AGONY CORNER: (Anti-establishment comment on latest scares cover-ups and conspiracies). MORE WI-FI BAD NEWS: All advanced societies now have 'WI-FI' hubs or routers sending out microwave radiation to facilitate the sending of electronic mail and use of the Internet. Previously we have commented on the multiple use of banks of these devices in schools leading to headaches and other painful conditions caused by the electronic 'smog' build up, and even whole towns being out-of-bounds to electro-sensitive people. Now we have news from a study in Holland that trees growing close to a wireless router have bleeding bark and dying leaves. The city of Alphen aan der Rijn ordered the study after officials found abnormalities on trees within the area. Researchers took 20 trees and subjected them to 6 types of radiation for 3 months. Trees placed closest to the wi-fi source developed a 'lead-like shine' on the leaves indicating the outer skin or epidermis was dying.

Over the whole country 70% of trees in urban areas exhibit the same symptoms compared to 10%, 5 years ago. Trees in densely forested areas are not affected. Establishment figures have been quick to point out that this was only a preliminary study and not conclusive that wi-fi is harming trees. This technology is now so big business that any negative connotations associated with it will undoubtedly be swiftly silenced! (Report: Daily Mail 24/11/10).

Looking from another angle, there is an alarming drop in sperm count amongst men living in western countries. In Britain overall the average count has dropped by 40% from 1945 to 2010. One survey finds that 40% of European men between the ages of 18 and 25 have sperm counts below that needed to father a child easily. The ever rising levels of obesity, particularly in Britain may be a major factor in infertility, as obese males have 20% less sperm count related to age. Other factors could be operating laptop computers from wi-fi signals, where the device is actually placed on the lap in close proximity to the reproductive area. The same is true for mobile phones set to receiving mode stored in trouser pockets. Any of these factors cannot be directly singled out as the cause of low sperm counts, and again, because of the size of the electro-communications industry, serious conclusions are likely to be suppressed. (Report: Sunday Times 26/11/10)

'CYBER ATTACKS' INCREASING: It has been clear for some time that even the most secure computer systems can be infiltrated by hackers thousands of miles away. This may be done for personal gain, revenge or malice, or government attempts to wreck an enemy's economy.

Amongst major players being attacked, the giant search engine company, Google, has had much of its input into China interfered with, in particular where websites have been set up by human rights activists. Following a year long investigation, Google reports they are being targeted by an attack on their corporate infrastructure from within China that resulted in the theft of intellectual property, and not only themselves but 20 other major companies who may not have been aware of this fact. They also think the primary goal of the attack was to access the Google-mail accounts of human rights activists.

Virus attacks are constantly reported with a recent survey suggesting 43.3% of these emanate from the USA, 14.1% from China, but just 2% from Great Britain out of 10 countries.

Another report from February 2010 suggests a single scam penetrated 75,000 computer systems in 2,500 companies around the world and had been started in 2008. It was detected as being run by a ring of hackers in Eastern Europe.

Attacks on NATO headquarters - the defence shield for the western democracies - are running at more than 100 a day. NATO's secretary-general, Anders Fogh Rasmussen, states: "It's no exaggeration that cyber attacks have become a permanent form of low-level warfare." Some countries have unleashed major cyber attacks on others - Russia has already blacked out Estonia in 2007, and Georgia, during the short war there in 2008.

Instances as mentioned above are almost endless and as soon as protective measures are in place, they do not take very long to be compromised. A major calamity appears to be in the offing and one fears for the future.

CHILD VACCINE DANGERS EXPOSED: The unfortunate Dr Andrew Wakefield whose research into links with the MMR vaccine and autism in young children was soundly rubbished by the medical establishment, and he has now fled to the States. Every trick in the book was used to wreck Wakefield's career - but what are the true facts about these vaccines?

Under the Freedom of Information Act, The Sunday Times has found there has been 40 deaths related to child vaccines over the past 7 years. There has been more than 2,100 serious adverse reactions in addition, some of which have been life threatening. The Medicines and Healthcare Regulatory Body who supplied the data point out these are a very small percentage out of 90 million doses given in the same period. However it is acknowledged that these figures only represent about 10% of babies who suffered same adverse reaction which may have been interpreted as another unrelated illness.

There are 15 injections given routinely to young children under the government programme. How much can an undeveloped immune system take? Falling sperm counts in prospective fathers, as discussed above, in turn lead to artificial methods of creating a baby and the prospect of a weakened immune system in the offspring as a result. Natural births and robust babies may now be the exception rather than the rule. Producing statistics to show how risk free the MMR vaccine was 10 years ago may no longer apply to the current crop of new lives.

The exposure has come after the government was forced under a legal ruling to accept that its vaccination programme had left a baby severely brain damaged. The victim, Robert Fletcher, now 18, had waited 13 years for an official ruling that the MMR vaccine had caused him massive brain damage. He has at last been given compensation. Another 18 year old, Jake Dukes, from Weymouth, Dorset was left severely brain damaged by the whooping cough vaccine received at 2 months. He has the mental age of a toddler, is incontinent and uses a wheelchair. The government has at last paid out £91,500 in compensation.

It is not clear what the chances are of dying from any one of the mentioned diseases should the vaccine programme be withdrawn. By contracting the disease at an early age the immune system is automatically strengthened. After the Wakefield scares and the reduction in MMR, measles outbreaks increased but no mention of mumps or rubella.

BRAZILIAN MILITARY RECOGNISE UFO RESEARCH

By Frances A Copeland

On Friday 20th May 2010 a historical day for Ufology in Brazil and around the world, as the Brazilian Air Force (FAB) for the very first time in its history, officially received a committee of top UFO Researchers to openly discuss UFO Sightings in Brazil and fully examine classified government UFO documents in several military facilities in Brasilia, the Federal Capital.

By taking this very important step, the Brazilian Air Force (FAB) has placed Brazil on a very short list of countries whose militaries acknowledge that Ufology is a serious activity and a significant effort to fully understand the nature and origin of UFOs. "We want to have all information on the subject, that is withheld by us for some decades fully released to public, through the UFO community" declared Brigadier Telles Riberio, chief of Brazilian Air Force Communication Centre.

The Brazilian Government through the Brazilian Air Force, finally decided to come forward and recognise UFO research as a genuine activity as a direct result of intense pressure by the campaign, UFOs: Freedom of Information Now, a movement started by the Brazilian UFO Magazine in April 2004.

The campaign was launched by the Brazilian Committee of UFO Researchers (CBU), composed of 6 UFO civilian researchers: Claudeir Covo, Marco Petit, Rafael Cury, Reginaldo de Athayde, Fernando Ramalho and AJ Gevaerd. Athayde was sick and replaced by new interim-member and veteran UFO researcher Roberto Affonso Back.

The approach to the Brazilian military by the CBU committee started last February, ten months after the campaign began, with a phone call from a Brazilian Air Force Spokesman, Major Antonio Lorenzo and a formal invitation to a visit and discussion at Air Force headquarters in Brasilia. Major Lorenzo fully recognised the UFO researchers' efforts in the field and provided a few details of what kind of classified files and procedures the Brazilian Air Force (FAB) has about UFO phenomena and its detection, recording and investigation.

Two meetings took place on Friday 20th May between the civilian UFO researchers and the military.

The first happened in the headquarters of the Integrated Centre of Air Defense and Air Traffic Control (Centro Integrado de Defesa Aerea e Controle de Trafego Aereo, Cindacta), a very sensitive facility. Over two hours the researchers were given lectures on the procedures conducted at Cindacta and had the chance to visit air traffic control rooms and understand how UFOs could be detected by Air Force personnel.

The second and most important meeting took place almost immediately, at the restricted facilities of Brazilian Air Defence Command (Comando de Defesa Aerea Brasileiro, Comdabra) an even more sensitive installation that controls the entire air defence systems in the country and surrounding areas of the Atlantic Ocean and South America. In this facility the UFO researchers were given a full briefing of the top aspects of aerial defence of the country.

It was at this facility that its commander, Brigadier Atheneu Azambuja, told the UFO Researchers how concerned the Brazilian military are about the UFO phenomena. Azambuja also gave details of Comdabra procedures and openly admitted that Brazil has systematically detected and registered UFOs – labelled as "H traffic" - since 1954. That was not a surprise for the Brazilian researchers but how this registering process took place.

After detailed explanations of Comdabra activities, Brigadier Atheneu Azambuja, for the first time in history gave full access to the civilian UFO researchers, allowing them to examine 3 different folders containing classified UFO information, cases from specific dates in 1954, 1977 and 1986.

The first case was an airplane in pursuit of a UFO over the ocean of Parana State.

The second file was much more important. In the folder containing the 1977 documents, there were dozens of cases of UFOs in the Amazon with an amazing 100 plus pictures taken during "Operation Saucer" an official program of UFO investigation by the military that took place from September to December 1977 and has been fully covered by specialised press around the world.

The third case was the "Official Night of UFOs in Brazil" a series of significant events that happened in May 1986 when 21 objects of over 100 metres in diameter jammed the Brazilian air traffic control system over Rio de Janeiro, Sao Jose dos Campos and Sao Paulo, when several jets were sent to intercept the intruders – without success.

The Brazilian Air Force (FAB) representatives at those meetings then fully admitted that Ufology is a serious business and broadly recognised the activity of UFO research by the civilian UFO community. It also guaranteed that further steps are about to be taken to let the researchers examine the entire military UFO files in a more comprehensive way, plus, a committee of military and civilian UFO researchers would be established very soon, co-ordinated by the Brazilian Committee of UFO Researchers.

(A Report by AJ Gevaerd, editor of the Brazilian UFO Magazine www.ufo.com.br)

This is the report of a new investigation and interview just conducted with the Retired Brazilian Army Lieutenant-Coronel Leo Tercio Sperb resident in Rio dos Cedros, a small town in the state of Santa Catarina, south of Brazil. The interview was obtained thanks to information given by former commander Jose Americo Medeiros, UFO Magazine consultant and NARCAP investigator, and performed with UFO investigator and volunteer translator of the Brazilian UFO Magazine Luis Medeiros.

The full interview is being transcribed for publication at the Brazilian UFO Magazine and what can be told is that the former Army military was involved in a major UFO incident in 1977, the very same year when Operation Saucer occurred in the Amazon, a hot year for Brazilian ufology.

Lieutenant-Colonel Leo Tercio Sperb revealed that this new found incident took place when he held the important position as commander for the 2nd Frontier Battalion, in the city Caceres, state of Mato Grosso, West Brazil.

The former military commander reported that in mid 1977 he was informed by his men that a small settlement located somewhere in the middle of the Cuiaba-Caceres Road was behaving excited about sightings of a strange and recurring luminous object that appeared predominantly at night. Having always been open to UFO issues and seeing the reports were significant, he sent a first man to do the preliminary investigations.

Captain Abrao (full name unknown) was commissioned to go to the site, talk to witnesses and collect as much data as possible and also any physical evidence of whatever was happening in the mentioned location. One piece of evidence found and retrieved was a sandal with burning marks similar to the burns caused by a welder's torch. This was found in the centre of a vast circular area of burnt vegetation left by the object, according to the astonished witnesses. They also reported that the UFO was seen regularly on those nights

Back at the 2nd Frontier Battalion, Captain Abrao reported the facts to Lieutenant-Colonel Sperb and handed over his report as well as the collected evidence, which led Sperb to conclude that something serious was happening in the area. The commander then gathered a troop of four men to be sent to the area immediately, one corporal and three soldiers. They received expressed orders to keep a stake-out in specific places in the woods close to the village, according to the witnesses' guidance, so they could have a full view of the unidentified flying object and photograph it as it moved.

At the end of the week the troop had been successful in documenting the observation of spherical UFOs, brightly lit exactly like the description given by the villagers. Several black and white photos were taken and handed over to the commander who concluded the mission was complete. The photos revealed lights similar to those in pictures obtained by the Operation Saucer. Sperb wrote up a report, attached the photos and collected evidence and sent them all to the Army Corps in Corumba. State of Mato Grosso do Sul.

The former military commander reported that after the troops had withdrawn, the UFOs apparently did not trouble the villagers again. He also added that he never got any reply to his report to the headquarters in Corumba.

When asked about his personal view of the alien presence on Earth, Lieutenant-Colonel Leo TercioSperb demonstrated that he belongs to a lineage of Brazilian military that is quite open and prepared to face the reality of the UFO phenomenon. He asserted that "there is no question about the existence of other intelligences in contact the Earth" and that "contact between them and us is inevitable and will definitely happen in the future".

Regarding the campaign, UFOs: Freedom of Information Now which has been in progress since 2004 Sperb said that civilian ufologists have every right and reason to request the secret documents kept by the Armed forces, and that the government should not only acknowledge the UFO phenomenon's reality but also disclose its files. "The truth must come out in the open"

by B. J. Burden*

There can be little doubt that an alien flying machine crashed near Roswell, New Mexico, in the early days of June 1947. The crash was hastily covered up, but not before the press officer at Roswell Army Air Force base, Lt Walter Haut had issued a press release declaring that a flying disc had been recovered.

The release was widely published before Air Force high command withdrew the report and issued photographs of a wrecked weather balloon. But how were they to discourage inquisitive journalists from descending on Roswell in strength to find out for themselves? The best way, surely, would be to provide a rival attraction which, when the time came, could be described incontrovertibly as a hoax. And who better to build it around than Kenneth Arnold, the pilot who gave the world the term 'flying saucer'?

Flying saucers entered public awareness when Arnold, an experienced pilot and freelance crash investigator engaged in a search for a wrecked aircraft near the Cascade Mountains in Washington State, had his attention distracted by a brilliant flash and spotted a group of objects moving at estimated speeds of about 1400 mph, twice as fast as the fastest jet in those days. They held Arnold's attention because of their unusual flight characteristics - like saucers skipping across water in a game of ducks and drakes. Arnold radioed ahead, and when he arrived at Pendleton in Oregon, an impromptu press conference was awaiting him.

The objects Arnold saw were not circular. In a drawing used to illustrate an article which Arnold wrote for Fate Magazine, they are boomerang-shaped. The press no doubt picked up on Arnold's use of the word 'saucer' because they had already heard rumours of flying saucers. American bomber pilots flying over Germany in the final stages of the war ending in 1945 had reported being tracked by things they called 'flying saucers', windowless aluminium-seeming discs a few feet wide, and while it may be that an alien civilisation was taking an interest in warfare on Earth, it is a fact that the German aircraft industry was turning out a variety of disc-shaped aircraft towards the end of the war. Aircraft designers Schriever, Habermohl and Miethe were all responsible for disc-shaped designs, and one of their prototypes reportedly achieved speeds of more than 1000 mph over Prague in 1945. This aircraft possibly employed a phenomenon called the Coanda effect, in which superheated jet exhaust is sprayed over the lifting surfaces of an aerofoil. The exhaust clings to the curve of the aerofoil, so that the plane rises up and flies in a bubble of superheated air, a sort of hot air balloon with the hot air on the outside and, hence, virtually no air resistance to restrict its speed.

The Germans were also working on flying wing aircraft and at the end of the war most of their exotic new designs - discs and wings - were taken over the Atlantic to be developed by the American aircraft industry. But what about those little men recovered from the Roswell wreckage for whom there is now witness evidence? They can hardly have been produced by the wartime German aircraft industry.

We are dealing, it seems, with two separate phenomena - exotic products of nazi technology, captured and developed under top secret conditions in post-war America, and authentic interplanetary craft of the sort that crashed at Roswell.

What led interplanetary craft to visit Earth. One popular theory amongst ufologists is that it was the three atomic explosions which ended World War II - the test explosion in the Nevada desert and the subsequent bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The aliens detected these explosions and came along to see what was happening. Since there was roughly a two year gap between Hiroshima and Kenneth Arnold's sighting, their journey must have been a long one.

When the Roswell crash confirmed that Earth was being visited by alien interlopers, a decision was taken at the highest level to cover things up, and as news of the crash began to seep out of the immediate area of Roswell, the Maury Island hoax was set up, possibly by Air Force intelligence, but more probably the infant CIA. Maury Island is in Washington State and therefore well away from Roswell. The story-line for the hoax resembled the Roswell narrative - a crashed UFO and recovered wreckage. Ray Palmer, the editor, who had published Kenneth Arnold's account of his flying saucer encounter was persuaded to employ Arnold to investigate the claims of two men, Fred L. Crisman and Harold Dahl, who said they had witnessed the crash. A investigation by Mr Flying Saucer himself was bound to command the attention of journalists and general public, whose curiosity about events at Roswell rapidly waned as a result. The saga ended with the loss of a USAF plane and all but one of its crew, as an indirect consequence, it was claimed, of a silly hoax created by Crisman and Dahl. After that the press and the public lost interest in the rumours of crashed saucers. Crisman and Dahl were actors in the charade, but the real hoaxers were probably the CIA, Crisman being revealed years later as a government agent.

In the 1950s, Major Donald Keyhoe published a series of books based on information leaked by air force high-ups who disagreed with the U.S Air Force's policy of concealment and believed that the public should be made aware of the reality of flying saucers. In the 1940s and 1950s, Keyhoe says, that the U.S Airforce believed that the flying saucers came from Mars. Their views were that, as in H.G. Wells's novel The War Of The Worlds, Mars was a dying planet, and that its inhabitants were seeking a new home. They decided that the Martians had advanced bases on the Moon and were contemplating some sort of colonisation programme on the Earth. After the Roswell crash a secret government appointed consortium of military chiefs, intelligence men and civilian experts, referred to as Majestic-12, deemed that the public should at all costs be protected from knowledge of the event and its implications.

This belief, Keyhoe alleges, led to military interference in the scientific observations of Mars during the 1954 opposition. Astronomers were keen to establish whether the canals which the astronomer, Professor Percival Lowell, had mapped on the Martian surface really existed. Canals would be a sign of intelligent life. Water courses of any sort would indicate conditions conducive to life.

The National Geographic Magazine inaugurated a Mars watch, promising to supply frequent bulletins and to publish telescopic photographs. Neither bulletins or photos materialised. Eventually the National Geographic published an article illustrated with colour sketches which showed nothing resembling canals. In his book, The Flying Saucer Conspiracy, Keyhoe alleges that the National Geographic's photos, taken at Mount Palomar observatory, showed the markings which are now recognised as dried-up river beds, but that these photos were confiscated by the Air Force and suppressed.

To add to the Air Force's woes in 1954, a huge satellite was detected orbiting the Earth. This was 3 years before Sputnik, the first man-made satellite. The story leaked but was rapidly suppressed. However, in 1969, the Observer published a story by their science correspondent headlined 'Moonlets Circling The Earth' which revealed radar had detected numerous tiny satellites. Research on their orbits, the article reported, indicated that they all originated from one large object which had broken up in 1954.

We still don't know for sure where the Flying Saucers come from - hence the advice from one military think tank that if the saucers proved hostile we should simply surrender, since without knowledge of their bases we have no real way of hitting back. But we now know for a certainty that the Roswell crash was a reality.

Anybody who doubts this should read a book by Colonel Philip Corso entitled The Day After Roswell. Published in the USA in 1997 it caused remarkably little excitement. Colonel Corso became chief of the U.S. Army's Foreign Technology Division in 1961 when he was given the job of arranging the reverse-engineering of devices found aboard the Roswell spacecraft by placing them with American companies such as IBM, Bell Laboratories, and Dow Corning for development. Corso calls this 'seeding'. Thanks to Roswell, he writes, we now have such things as transistors, fibre optics, night vision glasses, integrated circuit chips and lasers.

As to the alien bodies, Corso viewed these at first hand and also read the report of an autopsy on one of the aliens conducted at the Walter Reed Army Hospital. The alien, or 'E.B.E.' as Corso calls it, was particularly well-adapted for space travel, having huge lungs enabling it to survive on minimal amounts of oxygen and very light porous bones. There was some speculation, it seems, as to whether this being might have been a humanoid robot devised for space travel or a being genetically modified for the same purpose.

Corso is inconsistent about the precise nature of the aliens. At one stage he endorses the view that they were organic robots, but consider this:

"On-scene witnesses---said they had received impressions from the dying creature that it was suffering and in great pain. No one heard the creature make any sounds, so any impressions, Army Intelligence personnel assumed, would have been created through some type of empathic projection or outright mental telepathy. But witnesses said they heard no 'words' in their mind, only the resonance of a shared or projected impression much simpler than a sentence but far more complex because they were able to share with the creature a sense, not only of suffering but of profound sadness, as if it were in mourning for the others who perished inside the craft".

Corso's book is without an index, so I have not been able to ascertain whether he confirms a persistent rumour that one of the Roswell bodies was a semi-human hybrid. This carries us well into the realms of fantasy, but fits in with speculation arising from some of the alien abduction stories to the effect that the aliens were developing a hybrid race which would pass for human but would be better adapted for space travel than ordinary humans.

A seeming hybrid appears in the so-called Santilli film. Allegedly discovered among discarded film stock, it appears to be a record of an alien autopsy. When it surfaced in the 1990s, it was dismissed as a fake, particularly by UFO buffs who realised if they endorsed it would look foolish when the hoaxer owned up. No hoaxer has owned up, and in retrospect, it seems the film was probably authentic. The objection is that the detail is too poor for it to have been a viable record of an autopsy doesn't wash, since the detailed record would have involved still photography, which would have given you as much detail as you wanted. The film was probably taken to provide a narrative for the autopsy. A strong reason for believing the events in the film to be real is that at one stage a technician is shown prising a lens-like object from an alien's eye. Just such lens-like objects, Corso tells us, were recovered at Roswell. They proved to be night-vision glasses.

Corso confirms that alien abductions are a reality, and that the notorious animal mutilations on American ranches in the 1960s and 1970s were the work of aliens. These and other seemingly malicious actions by the aliens led Majestic-12 to regard them as hostile. Just as important, then, as the question "Where do they come from?" is the question "Where do they hang out when they get here?" since they are hardly likely to fly half way across the universe after every abduction or mutilation. One military pundit speculated that UFOs were a permanent presence and, at night, parked in the sky, blending in with the stars. Whether his statement was based on any concrete evidence, I do not know.

There are some intriguing gaps and loose ends in Corso's account. He tells us that the aliens had a base on the Moon, but not when its presence was first detected or whether it is still there. He further tells us that the Russians secretly welcomed Reagan's Star Wars project because the satellite surveillance involved would enable the Americans to tell them whether the aliens had set up bases in the remoter parts of Soviet territory. He does not, however, explain what reasons they had for regarding this as a possibility. Was there actually a base or bases which Russian troops eliminated or were these bases, like Saddams weapons of mass destruction, a product of paranoia? Presumably these omissions are the result of actual or voluntary censorship.

Corso states that the Star Wars technology was well named, since it was developed primarily to fight off the aliens, using, inter alia, laser and particle generator technology developed from equipment in the Roswell spaceship. Corso writes as if the war was won, though he does not tell us whether the aliens returned, whence they came from, or merely retreated to their Moon base to lick their wounds. Nor does he attempt to explain why UFOs are being observed from time to time. The preface, supplied by the right wing Senator, Strom Thurmond, for whom Corso worked after his retirement from the Army, has nothing to say about Corso's claims in this book, but a great deal to say about his integrity, length of service and military experience. In other words, the book is not a hoax. A flying saucer did crash at Roswell and that is a fact the debunkers cannot run away from.

EDITOR: I was surprised and delighted to receive this article from Brian, who was a regular contributor to Awareness some 20 years ago - more please!

Where 'Roswell' is concerned, I always quote the inexplicable gap between 1947 and 1979 where little investigation seems to have taken place. All material published since then may have the problem of continuity. What happened to captured aliens and craft in the 32 year interim? Would these masters of the universe actually allow their technology secrets to be stolen by puny humans? Presumably they could have ordered the rapid destruction of any captured equipment or fellow dead aliens. As with the Santilli film which emerged in 1995, I become more confused by the year as to what is fact and what fiction. I originally thought the body on the slab was real - but some sort of human freak - but then we had a silly spoof movie showing how the whole business was hoaxed, and later on another person emerged who was named as the mastermind behind it all. What can a poor editor looking for objectivity do - help!

ALIENS: THEIR HIDDEN AGENDA

by Margaret R. Buckingham*

Introduction:

I am 68 years old. I have been a Ufologist for nearly 50 of those years during which time I have changed my opinion several times as to the origins and intentions of our elusive alien visitors but now I have reached a conclusion which may prove to be of some importance. As I could drop dead at any moment and my ideas be lost forever, I have formulated the following article which I hope will interest other investigators so that together we might solve this mystery once and for all.

My belief in extraterrestrial life was sparked by the "Flash Gordon" serials I saw in my early teens at the local cinema on Saturday mornings but the first intimation that I actually remember of any ET activity was not news of the Roswell crash or of Kenneth Arnold's famous skipping flying saucers but of a review of "Flying Saucers Have Landed" by Desmond Leslie and George Adamski in the local "Echo". I believed in Orthon the Venusian instantly even before I read the book. I found to my joy that there were two Flying Saucer groups in my area which held meetings alternate weeks where I met rooms-full of equally excited, optimistic and naïve folk. Our happiness overflowed when George Adamski actually appeared in the flesh and gave a lecture in our town of Bournemouth during his world tour in April 1959 and confirmed what we all believed that our Space Brothers had come to save us from ourselves now that we had discovered and misused nuclear power and in a few short weeks or months or possible a year or two, they would show themselves openly and share their superior knowledge with us and we would all live happily ever after.

As we all know, nothing of the kind happened. Nevertheless, as the years passed we kept our hopes up by carefully filtering out any reports of ugly baddies who misused humans or who engaged in weird, illogical antics by dismissing them as negative and concentrating on the beautiful Nordic-type contacts. The Adam and Eve of abduction, Betty and Barney Hill, caused a ripple of disquiet when their book "The Interrupted Journey" eventually reached us and we learned that in 1961 they had experienced two hours of missing time during a car journey and under hypnosis, had revealed that they had been abducted by aliens and taken aboard a flying saucer and both had been subjected to a painful medical examination. Eventually, around 1968, I was jolted out of my dreamworld by news of the Antonio Villas-Boas case. He was a 22 year-old Brazilian farmer who had been abducted from his tractor while he ploughed his fields at night and taken aboard a landed flying saucer and seduced twice by a four-foot-something redheaded alien female.

The dreaded and dreadful question then had to be asked "Are flying saucers hostile?". The dreaded but not quite so dreadful answer was, "Not exactly but they have not got humanity's best interests at heart". This realisation was a terrible shock to me and it took me at least a year to recover and get used to the idea. From the melting pot of reports, ideas and theories accumulated over the following 30 odd years, I have reached certain conclusions as to the nature and intentions of the aliens which I now put forward for consideration.

Why they are here:

The aliens created us by tinkering with the DNA of the bonobo pygmy chimpanzees which are obsessed with sex which would account for our preoccupation with this activity. This GM procedure occurred many thousand years ago and was recorded by the Sumerians on clay tablets which were translated by Zecharia Sitchin and described in his many books. Other evidence that the aliens have always been with us can be found in prehistoric paintings where the familiar saucer shape appears amongst animals and men whilst an easily-recognisable "grey" face was found in an Egyptian frieze. Many later classical paintings show a "space-ship" often with light radiating down onto a human subject.

The purpose of our creation was and still is to provide sustenance for the aliens although we are not in the slaughter-house but in the dairy where we are "milked" of our energy. The Popul Vuh, the Mayan sacred book, states quite clearly that the Gods made humankind for their support and nourishment as shown in the following quotes. "Let us make him who shall nourish and sustain us!" "So, then, let us try to make obedient, respectful beings who will nourish and sustain us!"

The aliens instigated most if not all our religions ensuring that each successive faith contradicted the previous ones so that humankind would be forever at war thus releasing oodles of negative energy. Positive energy is produced by the prayers, hymns and chants dedicated to the gods of those self-same religions. I can recommend "The Gods of Eden" by William Bramley as he goes into great detail on this subject. The aliens occasionally appear as religious personages especially the Virgin Mary and hand out a few sweeties such as healings and visions as rewards and to keep us coming on over the centuries.

I first realised the significance of prayer and its importance to the aliens after learning of the Fatima incident which occurred in Portugal in 1917 when three shepherd children saw the Virgin Mary and were exhorted by her to pray continuously. She appeared several times but only to the children although a crowd of fifty to one hundred thousand people saw the sun dance among the clouds. Today, of course, we know better and would immediately recognise it as a flying saucer carrying out its usual manoeuvres.

I compared this report with the events as described by Andrija Puharich in his book "Uri" which tells of Uri Geller's early life and his contact with aliens which began at three years old. Despite the very interesting and mind-blowing happenings experienced by Geller and Puharich, to me the most significant and astounding revelation is when Puharich is exhorted by "nine entities who are millions of light years across the galaxy in time and space" to pray for peace between Egypt and Israel. He has several goes at this endurance test, the longest lasting 40 hours 4 minutes.

The Aetherius Society was founded by George King, a taxi-driver, on the instructions of Master Aetherius who was a member of the Solar System's interplanetary parliament based on Saturn. Members of the society are requested to charge mountains and special boxes with human spiritual energy which, they are told, could be used to avert wars. How very convenient – for the aliens!

Chanting plays a great part in most religions. Hinduism, Judaism, Buddhism and Christianity spring to mind when it is mostly carried out by monks but the type of Buddhism founded by a Japanese monk of the thirteenth century called Nichirin Daishonin exhorted all devotees to chant special verses in Japanese literally for hours on end every day in order to receive certain benefits which are specified by the participants. His life was saved by the appearance of a UFO as described in his own writings as follows:-

"Finally we came to a place that I knew must be the site of my execution. Indeed, the soldiers stopped and began to mill around in excitement. Shijo Kingo, in tears, said, "These are your last moments, "I replied, "How thoughtless you are! You should be delighted at this great fortune. Don't you remember your promise?" I had no sooner said this when a brilliant orb as bright as the moon burst forth from the direction of Enoshima, shooting across the sky from southeast to northwest. It was shortly before dawn and still too dark to see anyone's face, but the radiant object clearly illuminated everyone like bright moonlight. The executioner fell on his face, his eyes blinded. The soldiers were terrified and panic-stricken. Some ran off into the distance, some jumped from their horses and knelt on the ground, and others crouched down in their saddles. I called out, "Here, why do you shrink from this miserable prisoner? Come nearer! Come closer!" But no-one would approach."

It is now clear why the aliens have not landed on the White House lawn and taken us over because we are already taken over. We are being farmed and must be kept in ignorance in the same manner that the livestock that humans raise are kept in ignorance. In order to keep their hidden agenda well and truly hidden, they have staged a series of scenarios to suit each age and culture to keep us looking in the wrong direction. In the far distant past, they appeared as gods. The Hindu work "The Mahabharata" describes vimanas or the flying machines of the gods and "Indra's Dart" which could kill millions with one blast, appears to be very much like nuclear power. The Old Testament tells of flying wheels, the burning bush which was not consumed, how Jehovah travelled in a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, how Lot's wife was turned into a pillar of salt by facing another nuclear explosion and also how the Israelites were fed manna from heaven in the desert which sounds exactly like "Angel Hair" which is a white filament substance found lying around in the vicinity of UFO activity which dissolves after a few hours.

In the New Testament, the Star of Bethlehem fits the description of a modern UFO sighting whilst Jesus described Himself as the Son of David and the bright and morning star which of course is Venus. He was seen to talk to Moses and Elijah who had descended to earth on a cloud and He eventually rose into heaven on a cloud, a passable description of a flying saucer I would say if you had no technical knowledge.

Angels play a crucial part in most religions usually appearing with a vital piece of news. Adamski's Space Brothers could well pass for angels with their beautiful benign countenances and shoulder-length blond hair. Joseph Smith was visited by such a being who told him where to find some engraved gold plates which he duly translated and published as "The Book of Mormon". After the angel departed, he was overcome with such lethargy that he fell to the ground. Contactees are often paralysed whilst the aliens go about their business as was Maurice Masse, a farmer who came across a landed ship and two aliens ferretting about in his lavender field in Valensole in Provence, France. Some contactees have been rendered immobile by a beam emitted from a baton carried by aliens.

It was the Angel Gabriel himself who contacted Mohammed and imparted the Koran to him. There are three entirely separate and distinct races of intelligent beings according to the Koran. The highest category are angels which are created of light, the lowest category are men created of the chemical elements of the earth and the middle category are the Jinn described as consisting of essential flame or smokeless fire and it is specifically stated that they were created before mankind. They are mentioned many times in the Koran in a matter-of-fact way as if their interaction with humans was quite normal and acceptable. They have long been part of Arabic folklore which ascribes to them characteristics we have noticed in many an alien. They are not normally visible to humans but can materialise into the physical world at will and take on any guise, humanoid or animal which would explain the Loch Ness Monster, Big Foot and the Yeti and all the numerous other strange beasties seen about the world. An alien who hitched a ride with a couple in South Africa told them that he could appear as anything, even a duck if he so wished. At their worst they abduct humans and tempt them sexually and have liaisons with them and at best they are inveterate liars and deceivers and delight in tormenting humans and plying them with any old nonsense. Sounds familiar? I think so.

Interwoven with mankind's religious beliefs and the religious apparitions is the world of folklore. The little people, the fairies, gnomes, elves, brownies and pixies again are mostly invisible and abduct humans. This time they steal children and leave a fairy offspring or "changeling" in their place and they too, love playing tricks and tormenting us. They can paralyse humans with a wand and make objects change shape. Time in Fairyland would probably interest Einstein. There are many tales of strange time-slips. One such is of a young woman on her way to her wedding who stopped to dance with the fairies in a fairy-ring only to find afterwards that one hundred years had passed! A reverse version of this sad story can be found in Ufology. A Spanish soldier disappeared for fifteen minutes after his garrison was over-flown by a UFO only to be returned with a five-days-growth of beard and no recollection of where he'd been. The cover blurb of Jacques Vallee's book "Passport To Magonia" reads "from folklore to flying saucers". It is a must for all UFO buffs as it is a key work on the subject.

As humanity progressed into the industrial age, so the UFOs changed to suit our perceptions. In the late nineteenth century, they appeared as air-ships complete with pilots and in the nineteen-thirties scores of ordinary-looking planes overflew Scandinavia where no terrestrial craft were scheduled. After we had been primed by H. G. Wells space-age stories and Flash Gordon and his ilk, we found post-war that the real space-ships had arrived with flesh and blood occupants who told of inhabited worlds in our neighbouring planets and sometimes of far-distant homes in other systems. This was the scenario of the space explorer and surveyor who was often seen, similar to M. Masse's visitors, taking water and soil samples or sometimes he told of arriving on a scout ship from a cigar-shaped mother ship described as two miles long and carrying thousands of tourists. This particular performance has now expanded to include cattle mutilations and human specimens and their medical examinations. It is estimated that millions of earthlings have been abducted and tagged and their lives interfered with from babyhood, in fact, whole families have sometimes been involved and individuals have recognised other abductees whilst on alien craft. The beautiful Nordics are now seldom seen. They have been superseded by the greys who invade bedrooms and float the abductees through walls up into hovering craft for yet another intimate probe. The latest reports tell of earth women made pregnant with alien babies which are removed from the womb at three months and later seen by their mothers during subsequent abductions. We are obviously meant to deduce from this that the aliens are conducting an interbreeding programme (shades of the Old Testament when giants interbred with the daughters of men) possibly to save their race from extinction or for a final take-over of earth from within. But is this so? Could this be yet another scam to hoodwink our gullible race?

Remember! The aliens created us for sustenance. Everything they say or do is orientated towards keeping this unpalatable truth from being discovered. Certain individuals from our governments are in on the secret, whether by accident or design, but they are working in league with the aliens and have co-ordinated a vast cover-up programme of media censorship employing professional sceptics who are trundled out to deny everything whenever a grain of information leaks out. There are even magazines which specialise in debunking anything untoward. Aliens have always rewarded us for good behaviour and in this instance, governments have been given access to limited amounts of alien technology.

Where they come from:

And now the ultimate question! If the aliens created us, who created the aliens? We cannot possibly know, at least not yet and that is a question too far. We are only asking where do they come from and why are they here. I would answer that they could be the original Martians who came here when their planet died or that, like the Jinn, they are a separate race of beings who belong to the earth and live in, on or in the space around it and have bases in the earth or sea or on the moon.

One thing is for sure and that is that we have to abandon our normal human rules and measures when it comes to understanding them and their world. Many contactees are disbelieved merely because their accounts appear absurd but absurdity would seem to be the stuff of aliens as if their world and their Laws of Nature were not quite in synch with ours. This is Alienland or Magonia or Fairyland or Jinn Land or John Keel Land as described in his book "The Mothman Prophecies" which tells of his investigations into the appearance of a seven-foot tall apparition like a gigantic headless bird with glaring red eyes set in the shoulders, seen in the region of Point Pleasant in West Virginia. He would arrive unexpectedly at a motel and find a message awaiting him or he would receive strange telephone calls which are another feature of Alienland. Some of the inhabitants are the Men in Black, the gaunt, robot-like beings who travel in brand-new, old-fashioned cars and who pester the contactees by asking them questions about their experiences as if they are from some official body. Could this also be the realm of poltergeists, of psychic phenomena, of automatic writing and channelling? I would dismiss any message received through channelling as I maintain that they all have their origins in Alienland and contain the same propaganda and lies that hoodwink contactees.

Another strange alien habit hard to fathom is how they bring down their star pupils. One such, George Adamski, was riding high with a world tour and three best-sellers containing descriptions of joy-rides into space to the dark side of the moon where he saw buildings and a dog-type animal and to the inhabited surface of Venus. Years later, he was proved wrong by probes sent from earth and was consequently derided and accused of hoaxing. I remember how disillusioned I was at the time and even sold my autographed copy of "Flying Saucers Have Landed" when I needed funds. Years later, how I regretted my disloyalty as I realised that it was Adamski himself who had been hoaxed by the aliens and I had disposed of a treasured possession although I still have a photograph taken during his lecture. I presume that once again, the reason for this odd behaviour is to direct attention from their hidden agenda by pouring ridicule upon the whole subject of Ufology and thereby discouraging any serious investigation.

There is one further point to consider. It is accepted that Homo Sapiens suddenly appeared, in geological time that is, consequently, if the aliens had not genetically modified us, we would still be little more than apes and if we had been left to evolve naturally, we would have required far longer, probably many eons to reach our present level of evolution. Is this a good thing? We may have made a better job of it had we taken it more slowly but of course, we are not to blame for our violent and bloody history and our warlike propensity still in evidence today because, as I trust I have ably demonstrated, it was the aliens who programmed us for their own ends. Without us they cannot survive but I reckon we can well survive without them.

So what happens next? More of the same I would say, unless humanity as a whole wises up to the situation which isn't very likely. I trust that fellow Ufologists will take note of my diatribe and take it on board so that, at least, I shall know that when I am dead and gone my ideas will not have died with me but may one day help towards liberating the human race from its servitude.

EARTH ORBIT / EXTRATERRESTRIAL SCIENCE PROJECT LINK

by Michael Soper

Sudden huge, completely unpredictable and completely unexplainable explosions happen at various places on the Earth. I experienced a very minor example of this at the Rollright Stones circles near Chipping Norton, Oxon, at about one in the morning. There had been no prior flash and the meteorological condition was calm. The explosion sounded deep and not close by. In Charles Fort's work, New Lands, many historical examples of explosions are listed. However, relatively recently, and over the entire globe, the phenomenon is back. Attention is drawn to the following examples:

PLACE	DATE	STRENGTH(Kt)
Cando, N. Spain	18/1/94	2 kilotons
Lugo, Ravenna, N. Italy	19/1/93	No estimate
Marshall Islands, Pacific	1/2/94	11 kilotons
Eastern Mediterranean	6/6/2002	26 kilotons
Ischia island, Italy	10/9/2005	No estimate
Canterbury Province, NZ	12/9/2006	No estimate
Indian Ocean South	22/9/79	3 kilotons
Near E. Siberia	25/9/2002	2 kilotons

(Source: Nexus Vol 17, No 6 pp 47-48)

Note that these explosions feature at only 3 time groupings on the standard Earth orbit around the Sun. Episodes occur in Jan/Feb, June and Sept. Now the Earth undergoes the process of 'precession' which is a gradual shift of Earth's orbit due to the 23.5° axial tilt in relation to the orbital plane, the unequal distribution of mass and the slightly elliptical orbit around the Sun. The combined effect is that the Earth's orbit progresses by about 30,000 kilometres or 18,500 miles per annum. It can be shown that the precession results in only 4 small areas of the orbit where the Earth visits the same space in a 30 year period, and 3 of these are the positions of the Earth during reported explosions.

Suppose the Earth is sometimes leaving a trail of singularities like esoteric vortices that slowly evaporate, then only at points where the track of the Earth is retraced could these singularities be intersected. Experiments may be happening on the Moon, and the Earth flies through these on the Earth/Moon system like a flotilla intersecting their prior track. Consider that despite the most obvious of coincidences, folk often miss the connection. Some have very capably linked the explosions to the Large Hadron Collider (LHC) experiments. However this massive project is far less active than expected despite the initial publicity surrounding it (it boils down to normal hydrogen gas being sent round a ten mile loop amid paeans of media praise - in fact the gasboard does this better). There was a long period when the superconductive magnets failed catastrophically - and very expensively.

Note that the groupings determined by German author, Olaf Raabe, (Nexus, Vol 17 No 6) are most significant, though links to a barely operating LHC seem tenuous. However for one international research project in the public eye there are probably ten that are hidden and just as sizable. Some of these may emanate from our 'Scientific Space Brothers' that have the sense not to rip up spacetime near planets too often, since a fabulous interdimensional garden lives there. These explorers have probably chosen the Moon either on the dark side or near the crater Humboldt. Here a notable complex has been discovered, though this may be abandoned currently. Is the ongoing Space Scientist experimentation likely to have ceased - no - though is likely to have become less detectable.

Check the chronology:

- A) Late 19th century - huge airships cruise the States flashing beams.
- B) Early 20th century - huge object passes Sun.
- C) Early 20th century - mysterious Nordic rockets.
- D) 1930s - claimed messages from Mars.
- E) 1940s - strange radio signals, though could be howlers.
- F) 1950s - Scientific Space Brothers meet George Adamski. Their purpose is conjectural.
- G) 1960s - Very many anomalies in space flights near Earth.
- H) 1960s-1970s - missing time on aircraft approaches; unexplained atomic clock glitches.
- I) 1980s - sub microscopic implants appear.
- J) 1970s and 1980s - 'scientist' style CE4s, (Close Encounters 4th Kind).
- K) 1990-2000s the anonymous SOHO satellite's observations of activity near the Sun (not all pixel bleed).
- L) 1990-2000s the explosions in places such that the Moon retraces a prior path.

ARE HUGE EXPERIMENTS HAPPENING ON THE BACK OF THE MOON?

EDITOR: A fragment showing the possible scientific base for aliens on the Moon has been included by the author. This seems rather subjective and I personally cannot see any intelligent construction features, so have not printed it. Olaf Raabe's article is highly original but a larger sample size of unanswered explosions is desirable and whether they all fall within the intersection dates along the Earth's orbit. The Hadron Collider has not been running long enough to establish any upward trend as a result of creating uncontrollable nuclear forces. There is so much "messaging about with the planet" at the present time that the origin of the mystery bangs must remain an open question-----

SIGNS IN THE FIELDS 31ST YEAR - CROP CIRCLE REPORT 2010

by Geoff Ambler

Our previous edition discussed events up to the beginning of July when many large formations had appeared outside the usual clustering area of Avebury, Wilts. A surge in activity the last ten days in July and the first ten in August once more established Avebury as the main centre for crop circles, although overall there were circles in 12 different counties in 2010 compared to only 6 in 2009. The overall total in the UK is estimated at 56, less than the main website figure which included a number of 'dragon's feet' appearing in late July and August. These strange markings in wheat cannot be attributed to wind damage or animal activity, but are not necessarily linked to the main phenomenon. Of course a number of others look suspiciously like hoaxes because of the lack of symmetry shown in aerial photographs. The like for like comparison for 2009 is 70 formations with 66 in 2008. The overall percentage found in Wiltshire fell to 61% compared with 84% in 2009. With a wider distribution pattern it is likely that more circles went undiscovered than in the previous 3 years. One extreme disappointment was that not a single formation appeared in Oxfordshire, the first missing year since 1991, so there is no separate report compiled for the benefit of our incorporated group OCCCS.

Additional Formation in GUERNSEY C.I

Events overseas continue to be reported. Just how many we get to know about is another matter. For 2010 Italy was the strongest country with 22 formations and Germany had 13. Caution should be observed with this data as many of these circles look to be hoaxed or misidentified probably due to local inexperience. The total of 64 is as follows:

ITALY 22, GERMANY 13, BELGIUM 5, USA 5, HOLLAND 4, NORWAY 4, CZECH REP 3, ARGENTINA 2, RUSSIA 2, FRANCE 2, CROATIA 1, SWITZERLAND 1.

There was one outstanding giant formation in Italy, and also the sole Swiss representative.

Two or three German formations are also impressive.

PEAK SEASON HIGHLIGHTS: Two formations in south Warwickshire in the Warwick/Leamington area close to events of 2009 were very well formed (late June/early July). The furthest north this year did extend to Yorkshire where 4 designs were found in early-mid July including a huge glyph - probably 500ft long - at Sutton Bank, near Thirsk on July 5th. A quite surprising location was Woolaston Grange near the Severn Estuary, Glos, where a multiringed formation appeared on July 18th.

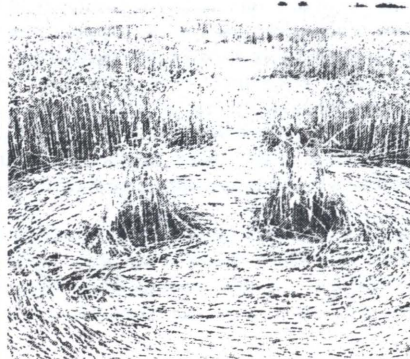

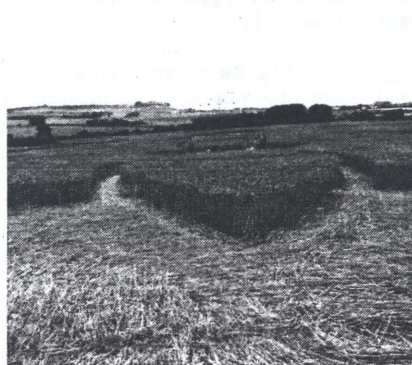

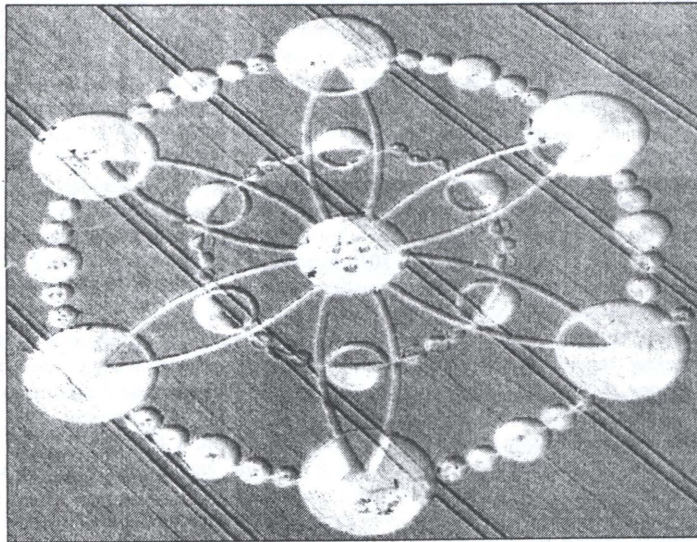

The major Wiltshire arrivals started on July 17th with a superbly executed hexagon design at Fosbury. A long bird-like design appeared below the Alton Barnes white horse on July 25th followed by linked up crescents in another beautiful design at Roundway Hill near Devizes on the same day. The long wait for the first 2010 formation at the famous East Field, Alton Barnes came the following day. This was a smaller design but with very neat features and inspected by CIUFOR on August 3rd. The most contentious arrival, also at East Field, arrived soon after on July 29th and was a string of decreasing size circles with side "tentacles" - clearly representing an insect form. Immediately declared a hoax on the Internet as someone claimed to see the makers leaving at 04.00, this huge design remarkably grew more side arms over the next two nights - some very bold hoaxers here! The writer found the formation deserted on August 3rd, but its companion, a few yards to the south, was full with visitors. The dowsing tests carried out, incidentally, showed the energy signature was all in place and you shouldn't believe everything you read on the Internet! A few miles to the north there was another superb glyph at Windmill Hill arriving on July 27th - with very unusual ground features as can be seen in the photos opposite. The curled up wheat felt very springy as if it had been treated with hair lacquer!

A total mystery was a pair of formations alongside the M4, on opposite sides of the motorway, near Hungerford, showing identical wide rings with a series of strings running across the diameters. Each string had a series of small circles placed on it indicating some sort of code. The north and south designs varied in the positioning of the circles but both were clearly made by the same source. The sleuths who respond readily to such events think that by superimposing the two formations the face of Jesus on the Turin Shroud appears! Another correspondent thinks it might be the Mona Lisa! Whatever are the true facts, one feels that some profound knowledge is being imparted here. A sobering thought is that thousands of motorists drove past this spot from July 30th with little awareness of a great mystery in the fields alongside them!

Into August the designs become slightly less sophisticated, but what looked like an egg slicer was discovered at a remote location, Whitefield Hill, Wilts, on August 5th. One like this had certainly never been seen before. Disaster was to befall on August 8th, when a huge, almost perfectly created formation at Pewsey Down was cut out by a hostile farmer before 10.00 in the morning. The ground view of this field below the white horse is the best in Wiltshire and photos taken at the top of the hill are nearly as good as from an aircraft. It is believed only one photographer managed to secure an aerial view. The last wheat formation in The Avebury area at North Down, Beckhampton, on August 13th seemed to represent religious symbolism of the Christian Challis or Jewish Menorah.

Some activity in maize crops was discovered in late August and September, but not quite as ambitious as 2008 in the Avebury area. A last cheeky farewell was found at the end of September, when a thin strip of wheat left over from the main harvest in a field near Devizes received a fairly significant pictogram. Apparently the farmer had been paid to leave a strip behind for the benefits of wild birds - but the circle makers seize every opportunity!

At the end of the 2010 season, the phenomenon has marked rape, barley, broad beans, wheat and maize crops over a 4-5 month period so appears to be in rude health!

HONESTY BOX SCAM: Crop circles may be a demonstration of art, grace and beauty, but certain human scum also reduce the annual festival as an opportunity to make ill-gotten gains off visitors, many who have travelled from overseas. Not content with breaking into cars when the enthusiast is out of view in a field, it now transpires that the 'honesty boxes' placed by farmers who co-operate with visitors by allowing access are being substituted by fake versions placed inside a formation. Presumably the scumbag sneaks back into the field after dark and removes the cash for the day. Farmer Tim Carson of East Field fame now places a very heavy 45 gallon drum painted pink, with the collecting box welded to the top, (see photograph). Better stop here before the language gets too blue!!

SUPER HONESTY BOX
AT ALTON BARNES

ROMEO----- ROMEO-----
MIKE SOPER CHATS UP LADY
AT THE BARGE INN

THE BARGE INN: In case it has not been mentioned before, the longest surviving meeting up point for cropies and ufologists alike is this rather scruffy pub alongside the Kennet and Avon canal just a few yards from the crop circle bearing fields at Alton Barnes. Heading south from the Alton Barnes junction on the route to Honey Street and Wilsford, the pub is up a right turn after the canal bridge and don't be put off as you have to drive through a timber yard to get there! The snooker room at the back has its walls set aside for crop circle information denoting all the formations on maps over the past ten years or so. There are all the current photographs on display too denoting where you can obtain copies and any other information you might need. Outside there are moorings available if you pass by on a barge, and a large space is set aside for camping tents and caravans. (See photograph).

At the end of 2010 it appears we have more of the same - brilliant original designs, but no record breakers in numbers of circles or dimensions this year. Interpretation of what is being shown remains totally enigmatic, although many attempts to decode are made. It is clear that the relationship between the force, intelligence or whatever it is and the human race must remain at this level for many more years. Hopefully some day -----
